

This module has been specifically designed for anyone involved in the delivery of health care who would like to know more about the rights and responsibilities of health-care personnel in armed conflicts and other emergencies.

The purpose of this module is to make you think about specific dilemmas that health-care personnel may face when discharging their responsibilities in emergency contexts. While it cannot provide answers to such dilemmas, it aims to ease decision-making and to provide guidance for how to act in the most difficult circumstances.
