

Launch of Zika podcast series

27 March 2017 – WHO launches the first podcast episode in a series of 5, called Evidence in action, that focus on Zika virus infection. WHO's experience over 2016 has shown that Zika virus and the associated neurological complications represent a long-term public health challenge. These episodes range from tracing the disease to the long-term management of Zika virus syndrome.

Listen to the podcast