

Refugee children hard hit by coronavirus school closures

Going to school was already a daily challenge for many displaced children around the world. Now there are fears some may not return after COVID-19 lockdowns lift.

Muhammad, 10, says he has been very bored at home during the last month of coronavirus curfews in Jordan. A refugee from Syria, he lives with his parents and four siblings in a small apartment in East Amman.

© UNHCR/Lilly Carlisle

By UNHCR Staff | 11 May 2020 | Español | Français | عربي

Going to school was already a daily challenge for many displaced children around the world. Now there are fears some may not return after COVID-19 lockdowns lift.
