Abstract

In the Bible we find, in the “book of Genesis”, two accounts of creation, which refer to two experiences, two different cultural and theological traditions.

The Synoptic reading of the tracks offers the possibility of a deep reflection on what are the concepts “of creation such as universe and of creation such as making” and the role of the man in the creation with its function. This article aims to assess the character and the reference.

It turns out the idea that man's identity, the result of a relative creature.

This ratio, deeply troubled allowed in “modern era to record a growing ability to transformative intervention of man. The aspect of the conquest and exploitation of resources became predominant and invasive, and came to threaten today ‘s hospitable environment; the
